BIBLIOLATRY

Bibliolatry is the idol worship of the Bible. This is something different from "idolizing" the Bible, which means adoring its aesthetic spirituality, becoming inspired by its ethical urge, admiring its literary beauty, studying its advanced social message, etc. Bibliolatry is the worship of the Bible because you believe it to be literally "the word of God," holy and sacred—every letter and syllable of which you believe to be true. True historically, true scientifically, true in every sense of the meaning of the term true. The idolatry of the Bible is the same as all other kinds of idolatry, excepting that instead of endowing a stone or stick with all sorts of imaginary Divine powers, as heathens do, you transfer these same powers to a book. Its study, therefore, becomes for you the supreme study of studies. In this way you partake and become imbued with this Divine power. This idea, which is a sort of taboo, is reflected in the primitive meaning of the Talmudic phrases, metame-es-Hayodayim and eno metame-es-Hayodayim as applied to the Divinity or non-Divinity of a canonical book.

The Rev. Mr. Moggeridge, one of the characters in H. G. Wells' latest novel, "The Dream," expresses the view of all his class when he says: "Now, my boy, let me give you this old familiar book with an old man's blessing. In this is all the knowledge worth having, all the knowledge you will ever need. It will not undermine your faith nor sow doubt as does geology and evolution." The rabbis in the Talmud express the same thought in the phrase: "Hafach ho v'hafach ho de kulo ho"—Turn it over and over; it (the Bible) contains everything.

There is a mystic belief that somehow if we could succeed in ramming the Bible down the throats of school children who don't seem to take to the Bible as they do to Dickens or the "movies" and impress its lines on their memory, that the godlessness of the growing generation would disappear, that the "immoralities" of our adolescence would be replaced by puritanical piety. It is this mysticism that is fundamentally responsible for the present "drive" to make Bible reading compulsory in the public schools. There is hardly a State in the United States whose legislature is not at present dealing with a Bible Bill. We, in Canada, especially in Ontario and the Western Provinces, have laws which make the daily reading of the Bible and the reciting of the Lord's Prayer compulsory in our public schools, and many Christian clergymen and laymen are even urging direct religious instruction in the public schools, as if the Bible readings were not in reality instruction in the Christian religion even to non-Christian children.

Bibliolatry is as much a menace to true religion as all other forms of idolatry are. The prophets of true religion always denounced the worship of idols. The study of comparative religion proves that the lower the religious development of a people, is the more idols their cults contain, whilst the higher the religious advance of a people the fewer the idols. In Judaism the condemnation of the worship of idols is considered of sufficient importance to make it the subject of one of the Ten Commandments.

The drive to get Bible-reading into the public schools can only be explained as a reversion to Bibliolatry. The very arguments one hears from the very advocates of the Bible Bills is proof of Bibliolatry. It indicates an unfortunate retrogression in religious belief.

It must be evident to any thinking person that the objective scientific reading and study of the Bible can have no such mystic power as those who advocate it for the public school presuppose. The mere reading of the Bible will not make anyone religious, or God-fearing, or moral, any more than the reading of the Odyssey or Plato's Republic would accomplish such a result.

The Bible is for both Judaism and Christianity a mere skeleton which, to give it life religiously, has first to be clothed with sinews and muscles and covered with skin. It is this process of filling out the Biblical skeleton that fashions the religion of Judaism and Christianity. And what is more, the 257 sects and denominations into which Christianity is divided are the result of different attempts to clothe this skeleton differently. In reality the attempt to force the Bible reading into the Public Schools is a drive to introduce sectarianism into the schools, under the guise that the Bible has mystic powers to make people good.

What will be the result? Even if these attempts succeed by virtue of the political power at present wielded by the Ku Klux Klan in many States, it will ultimately prove a failure, and the undoing of the very purpose the Bible zealots are after.

And why?

The very people who advocate the Bible reading are the most obscurantistic fundamentalists in Christianity. They are opposed to the doctrines of evolution, and regard science as the devil in disguise trying to undo religion. They are against Biblical criticism and will discharge a teacher caught teaching the Bible in the only way it can be taught understandingly. Just imagine teaching young people physics and chemistry and geology in one room and the legendary stories of Genesis as true and historical accounts in another room. When Bibliolatry and science meet in the mind of the young person, what will be the outcome? Has not experience already shown us what the result must be? Why do our young high school and college students appear irreligious? Is it because they have no religious feelings and emotions and no hunger for true religion? I deny this. The young men and women of our generation have a religious hunger, but instead of feeding them with nourishing and satisfying food, we feed them stones quarried from the antiquated theological mines of two thousand years ago. Is it any wonder then that they look upon the Bible as a collection of fairy tales, and religion as "bunk." I sympathise with them. I feel for them. What they want is less Bibliolatry and more Bible, fewer prayers and more religion, less ritualism and more religion. This they will not get if the Bible Bills now pending in many States are adopted.

I believe, with all the fervour of my being, that this attempt to force the Bible into the schools will prove the last undoing of the efficacy of the Bible and religion for our young people.

True religion can not be taught by rote; it must be induced by example. Morality can not be fostered through suppression and repression; it can only be developed by moral experience and training in the right habits of action. The abstract thing we call character is after all the synthesis of our training in doing the right thing at the right time, and by the right thing we mean that which society regards as right.

The cult of Bibliolatry had its greatest vogue in the times of the Christian Reforma-

every friday

So the Ku Klux Klan wants to do business in Canada, and seeks articles of incorporation there in pursuance of its design. This is splendid. It is high time those boorish English got a taste of Georgia idealism. But hold: a thought! Isn't this organization dedicated to 100-per-cent. American supremacy? Then on what theory does it seek members in Canada? Ah, we had forgotten something, that $10 initiation fee. Then kiss us a sad farewell, thou Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean. Thou wert a good old Columbia for a little while, but internationalism is the thing now. It gets more members.—New York World.

Thirty years ago Esmond Isaacs, writing in Montreal, said that many learned and able rabbis are lost to Orthodox congregations because of the failure of the people to provide sufficient funds for their support and that Orthodox Judaism would have to conform to its American environment if it would retain equality in pulpit ability with Reform congregations. To-day in the city of Minneapolis it is necessary for the American Jewish World to call attention to the fact that an Orthodox rabbi, the oldest in the city, is ill, in straits, with his income cut off because he is unable to perform his duties.

Evidently there has been no sharp change in the situation in thirty years. Isaacs complained then that, throughout Canada and the United States, Orthodox rabbis received such meagre stipends that they could not maintain their positions in the community and the same might be said now. His prophecy that the most capable men inclined toward the rabbinate would be attracted to the Reform rabbinate, where remuneration is generous, has also come true.

Sons go from the most Orthodox homes to study for the Reform rabbinate at the Hebrew Union College. At graduation they expect about $4,000 annually as a beginning salary and their rewards for services make it impossible for any one to be a picture of malnutrition or threadbare poverty. Temple Emanu-El in New York has just increased the salaries of its rabbis to $20,000 a year. More than half-a-dozen rabbis in America are paid $15,000 a year and more than forty get from $10,000 upwards. With the wealthy, expanding Reform congregations it has become a point of pride to show how much they can pay their spiritual heads and how often they can tell about it.

Meanwhile, thirty years after Isaacs said that Orthodox rabbis were much underpaid, the editor of the American Jewish World can write with truth that the Orthodox rabbi, as a rule, does not even receive a fixed salary. At best he gets a pittance from weddings, funerals, simches, hech-shay-rim of kosher products, and every one expects him to retire a millionaire, at least. The more lavish and showy the wedding, the more rigid the economy exercised in the rabbi's fee. The more congregations supposed to contribute patronizingly to the rabbi's support, the less each one gives and the oftener each forgets what it intended to give. The Orthodox rabbi has many duties. He must make speeches at many occasions, collect funds for all sorts of Jewish causes, be the storm centre in case of kash-rus problems and bear the onus of the sacramental wine question, says the World. For this and more it seems the aim of Orthodox congregations to get the biggest bargain they can for the most niggardly sum.

Why is this? It is idle to say that there is no wealth among the Orthodox Jews. They are in the great majority. It is idler still to say that they spend their money with less ostentation than the Reform Jews. It must be that they are wedded to the old-fashioned theory that the professional man should live above the lure of filthy lucre, untroubled by financial worry. Whatever their attitude in this regard, Orthodox congregations should shake themselves loose from it for their own good. Orthodox Judaism in the States seems to have received a new impetus. It may be that American anti-Semitism is responsible or the growth of Reform Judaism or the fear that, with decreased immigration from Europe, Orthodox Judaism will dwindle and die. Whatever it is, there is energy shown in the new Yeshiva in New York, the organization of Orthodox rabbis and congregations, the erection of community centres. Somewhere in all this stir there should be room for the question of how to encourage capable, representative, ministerial leadership and how to maintain pulpit ability equal to that in Reform congregations.

Blankets will not shrink if washed this way—

To keep your blankets soft, fluffy and unshrunken—wash them in Lux. Blankets of fine wool, wool nap, wool and cotton—you can trust them all to the gentle Lux suds.

Wash blankets this way:

A rich live suds is essential throughout the washing of blankets. To obtain this, use two tablespoonfuls of Lux to every gallon of water in the washing.

Dissolve the Lux thoroughly in very hot water, whisking it into a thick suds. Add cold water until lukewarm. Put the blanket into the rich suds, souse it up and down, and squeeze the suds through the entire blanket. If suds die down, add more Lux, taking care that it dissolves before you put the blanket in again. Press the suds through the soiled spots if any, but never rub the blanket.

Rinse in three or more lukewarm waters, of the same temperature as the suds. Fold evenly, run through a loose wringer and hang dripping. Never wring tightly. Pull gently into shape at intervals when drying. Do not expose wet blankets to extremes of heat or cold.

Ordinary common bar soap or chips shrink wool, and coarsen and yellow it. Lux is mild and pure, and entirely free from any ingredients that could harm or shrink wool fibres. Lux keeps your blankets like new.

STANDARD

Mme. Lobel is well known to the Yiddish theatre-goer, and, although she has not been here for a number of years, her performances are still remembered by those who had the pleasure of seeing her at that time.

A cordial invitation is extended to friends and patrons of the Standard to attend Mme. Lobel's performances.

EMPIRE

There will be a gala week of Columbia Burlesque, at the Empire Theatre next week, when Mollie Williams and Her Revue come to that playhouse. In past seasons, Miss Williams has kept faith with her public in giving them a splendid show, and this year she promises to even excel her previous efforts. To this end she has provided a scenic equipment of twenty-two gorgeous scenes, a wealth of exquisite costumes and a chorus of rare charm, sprightliness and talent. William K. Wells, a noted author of many Broadway musical comedies, has written a mirth-making book and twenty snappy lyrics. For the latter, Malvin Franklin has provided some of the most jingly and tuneful music heard in a long time. Francis Weldon, noted producer of musical revues, has staged these numnumbers, while the entire production has been produced under the personal supervision of Miss Williams herself. As usual, Miss Williams heads the big cast, being supported in a most satisfactory manner by Fred Harper as principal comedian, assisted by Bobby Wilson and other expert fun-makers. Others in the cast include Bebe Almond soubrette, Ray King, straight man Morton and Mayo, character men, John Mack, dramatic man, Addie Clifford, singer of blues, and Ella Corbett, ingenue. Miss Williams again features an intense dramatic sketch this time entitled "The Slave Dealer." She is also using a special called "The Mail Girl," in which she appeals for an increase in salary for the postal workers. Chorus girls' contest Thursday night.

SHEAS

William Morris and family and Flanagan and Edwards share headline honours at Shea's Theatre next week. Mr. Morris and his family will be seen in his one-act comedy "All the Horrors of Home."

Ed. Flanagan and Neely Edwards are known all over as "The Hallroom Boys" of comedy pictures.

Eddie Clayton and Frank Lennie are comedians of the eccentric variety. They will be seen in "A Sundae in London" by Claude W. Bostock.

The "Parisiennes" programme carries out the idea of an evening in one of the gilded roof palaces of gay "Paree." The featured members of the troupe are Cully and Claire and Merette Webber. They are assisted by an orchestra of singing musicians, directed by Carl J. Garrick.

Lew Oliver and Mae Olsen will be seen in "A Series of Smiles." Oliver and Olsen are singing comedians. Paul Kirkland and Company will be seen in "The High Stepper." Keo Taki & Hoki are versatile entertainers from Nippon.

Movement to Help Farmers

A movement is on foot to form an organization of Toronto Jewish citizens to assist Jewish immigrants who want to locate on farms. A meeting will be held Sunday, March 29, afternoon and evening, at Holy Blossom Synagogue, Bond Street. The man back of this proposed organization is Morris Saxe, a farmer of Georgetown.

Mr. Saxe has farmed there for about twenty years and holds 200 acres of land. He believes that the reason Jewish immigrants do not want to stay on farms is not a lack of disposition on their part, but the fault of general conditions they meet. In an interview with THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW this week, Mr. Saxe drew a word picture of what the prospective Jewish farm hand has to meet with when he decides to go on a farm.

In the first place the farmer immigrant is almost always placed with Gentiles whose way of life he is at first unfamiliar with. The chief item of food offered him is pork which he does not want to eat and to which he is not accustomed. He is a foreigner isolated from those who understand him best and whose language he speaks. As a result the Jewish immigrant, who was in good faith when he declared his intention of going on a farm, becomes discouraged and disheartened enough to forfeit his bond (of $200 at least) at Ottawa.

The situation then assumes doubly bad proportions, says Mr. Saxe, for, besides the fact that good farmers are lost to the land, the government is inclined to make it harder for all those who want to try farming. The fact that many Jewish immigrant farmers do break their promises to remain on farms gives all immigrants a black eye with the government.

To remedy matters Mr. Saxe wants to interest Toronto Jews in taking up about 500 acres of farm land where incoming Jewish farmers can train in all the branches of agricultural endeavour. He believes that the responsibility lies with Toronto Jews to help immigrants in this way as in others.

Mr. Saxe, who is a prosperous farmer now, received $40 and a horse for his first thirty-six months' farm work. He says that Jews make good farmers, properly started, and that it is the duty of Canadian Jewish citizens to see that as many as possible are made happy on farms out of the congestion of the cities. The first movement in this direction will be the organization urged by Mr. Saxe.

tion with Luther. Then it served a unique purpose. Is it not significant that the Jews who gave the Bible, old and new, to the world were never Bibliolators. Judaism was never identifiable with the Bible. Only one small and insignificant sect of Jews were ever Bibliolators. This sect grew up in mediaeval Spain and was known as the Karaites. For the Jew the Bible served as the apex of an upturned pyramid all of Jewish lore. Law, literature, philosophy, ethics had their beginnings in the Bible. But Judaism did not stop with the Bible, it only began there. It is preposterous, therefore, to identify Judaism with the Bible.

It is because I love the Bible and feel that it has an important role to play in the spiritual development of every cultured person that I believe that the modern cult of Bibliolatry is a menace that deserves to have short shift made of it.
